Arriving just in time for his memorable, if involuntary, omnipresence in the music video for a certain Canadian pop star’s hit single, James Turrell’s fifth solo show with this gallery features three large-scale pieces from his “Elliptical Glass” series of LED light and etched glass sculptures along with a choice selection of ink-jet and woodblock prints based on the Aten Reign installation Turrell staged at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum back in 2013. In the memorable words of Drake, come on down and “fuck with” Turrell this fall.
