James Turrell Designs New Space for Kayne Griffin Corcoran

01.11.13

James Turrell will design a new space for Los Angeles gallery Kayne Griffin Corcoran, reports Carol Vogel of the New York Times. The new Santa Monica location is ten thousand square feet and was built in the 1940s. Once an auto shop, it is a “beautiful, vaulted space,” according to Turrell, who adds that he has devised a system so it can be a “black box, white cube, and everything in between.” The gallery will have a permanent installation by Turrell, including one of his famous “skypaces.” The new space is set to open May 18 with its first exhibition devoted to forty decades of Turrell’s work.
